UK Outlook for Saturday 11 Sep 2021 to Saturday 25 Sep 2021:
Confidence decreases into this period, partly due to possible continued heightened tropical storm activity. However, there is an increasing signal for a more unsettled spell, the focus for this likely to be toward the west or northwest of the UK, with the south and southeast perhaps holding on to drier weather. These less settled conditions are likely to continue through Mid-September, before a trend toward drier weather late in the month, especially across the south. Temperatures are likely to be near to or a little above average for the time of year.
